""Really? You believe tears would sway me?""
—Nirah, to a woman begging for her help

Nirahlyn Asgerr is a rogue sorceress, formerly bound to Aretuza and the Brotherhood. Though not too long after her ascension she chose her own path and seemed to disappear without a trace. She only makes an appearance when she wishes to and is careful to hide any trace of her to avoid being found.

Personality

Once a kind and sweet girl, perhaps a bit naive, her life certainly changed her quite a lot. Over the years she has grown distrusting and hostile, only helping when she can expect coin in return and even then achieving whatever is asked of her in not quite friendly ways. She takes pride in her skill and though it does border on arrogance, she is never too full of pride.

Physical Appearance

A tall woman with a rather slender build, seemingly completely unharmed skin of a somewhat pale complexion. Dark greyish green eyes with a tiny hint of blue tend to always dart around, watching her surroundings very closely. Her long hair tends to be tied back in a few strands with the rest falling over her shoulders and back in nearly entirely golden blonde waves. Usually she is seen in a rather simple red dress with a leather belt around her waist and a red bandana that is held in place by a thin strip of leather. Though that outfit very often alternates with a black dress that also doubles as elegant armor.
